

No majority in favour of GMO deregulation among EU agriculture ministers

Veröffentlicht am: 12.12.2023

The Spanish EU Council Presidency has failed in its attempt to gain a sufficient majority of Member States in favour of genetic engineering deregulation in a rush job. This, at least, means a brief break in the debate.

Fast-track deregulation has failed for the moment

Alexander Hissting, Managing Director of the Association for Food without Genetic Engineering (VLOG) comments: "Fortunately, the attempt to fast-track the deregulation of genetic engineering has failed for now. The German Agricultural Minister Cem Özdemir rightly said very clearly during the vote in Brussels that the current plan would pose an existential threat to the billion-euro organic and 'Ohne Gentechnik' (Non-GMO) markets.

Links zu diesem Artikel

- VLOG - Verband Lebensmittel ohne Gentechnik e.V.: No majority in favour of GMO deregulation among EU agriculture ministers